The Circumstance smiled to itself, thinking they might have some to that conclusion long ago without all this trouble and heartache. It did not know how near it had come from never waking from that sleep. And then, as the full purport of their new resolution came to it, the Circumstance busstered with mighty objections. To be second in their affection means nothing more nor less than defeat. But they merely listened to its ragings and

For the Circumstance was their own child, A queer ourl came to the king's mouth, something between a smile and a sneer. He called the chairman to him. "You will now receive the reward of justice," he said. "Kindly step down into the arena." Then he
